

Introduction

Togo is a country in Western Africa bordering the Bight of Benin. Neighboring countries include Benin, Burkina Faso, and Ghana. The geography of Togo is characterized by a rolling savanna in the north, hills in the central region, and a savanna, woodland plateau, and coastal plain in the south. The government system is a republic; the chief of state is the president, and the head of government is the prime minister. Togo has a mixed economy in which the private sector is emerging, but most of the population relies on traditional subsistence agriculture. Togo is a member of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS).

Risk Assessment (Provided by Coface)

Country rating: C - A very uncertain political and economic outlook and a business environment with many troublesome weaknesses can have a significant impact on corporate payment behavior. Corporate default probability is high.

Business Climate rating: B - The business environment is mediocre. The availability and the reliability of corporate financial information vary widely. Debt collection can sometimes be difficult. The institutional framework has a few troublesome weaknesses. Intercompany transactions run appreciable risks in the unstable, largely inefficient environments rated B.

Strengths

- Mineral resources (phosphate, limestone and clay transformed into clinker) and agricultural resources (coffee, cocoa, cotton).
- West Africa's only deep-water port (Lomé), potential to become a regional hub
- Public and private investment in infrastructure and agribusiness, supported by Chinese and Western partners
- Structural reforms underway (public finance, banking system, agriculture, phosphate and cotton sectors)
- Member of WAEMU and ECOWAS
- External debt largely concessional

Weaknesses

- Major socio-political tensions
- Poor business environment
- High unemployment and poverty rates (30.6% of the population lived in poverty in 2022)
- Deficient agricultural infrastructure: storage, processing, irrigation, inputs
- Inadequate education, public health and transport infrastructures
- Poor state of the banking sector; high level of bad debts (especially for public banks)
- Poor progress in governance (particularly in the fight against corruption)
- Jihadist incursions in the north of the country
