Why Being Big Isn't Big Enough, Anymore

The world has changed; Organizationally we have not. We need to re-imagine the fundamental enterprise. Imagine a world where people can come together easily as co-creators of ideas. Imagine a world in which customers are more than transactions, and team-members are more than payroll recipients. In that world, shared purpose would be integral to what and how we create value. As an organizing principle, shared purpose can change everything and this talk explores what it means for each of us as individuals, and for the organizations we lead.
