

Introduction

Burundi is a landlocked country in the Eastern Africa Great Lakes region. Neighboring countries include Rwanda, Tanzania, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

Burundi is hilly and mountainous with access to Lac Tanganyika. The government system is a republic; the chief of state and head of government is the president. Burundi has a traditional economic system in which the allocation of available resources is made on the basis of primitive methods, and many citizens engage in subsistence agriculture. Burundi is a member of the Common Market for Eastern and Southern Africa (COMESA), the East African Community (EAC), and the Economic Community of Central African States (ECCAS).

Risk Assessment (Provided by Coface)

Country rating: D - A high-risk political and economic situation and an often very difficult business environment can have a very significant impact on corporate payment behavior. Corporate default probability is very high.

Business Climate rating: E - The highest possible risk in terms of business climate. Due to a lack of available financial information and an unpredictable legal system, doing business in this country is extremely difficult.

Strengths

- Subsoil resources (rare earths, nickel) largely unexploited and agricultural potential (coffee, tea)
- Return of international financial support
- Progressive opening-up of the country

Weaknesses

- Fragile political and social institutions in a country marked by putsches, authoritarianism and ethnic conflicts
- Extremely poor business environment (uncertain regulations, shortage of foreign currency and high exchange premium on the parallel market)
- Lack of diversification of the economy, which is essentially based on the primary sector
- Little productive subsistence farming concentrated around Lake Tanganyika, which is subject to frequent flooding
- Weak infrastructure (energy, water, transport, sanitation)
- Widespread extreme poverty (62% of the population in 2023)
